THIS DAY.

A large amount of business has been put through in the Share Market this morning. Banks are firm with cash buyers at 202 per cent. premium, and sales have taken place at 207 for the end of August. China Traders have changed hands at the increased rate of $2,500 per share, buyers offering to go on at that figure. Yangtzes have been negotiated at 1060 and Chinese Insurances are wanted at 215 ex. div. Hongkong Fires have been parted with at quotation and are still in strong request. Docks have risen to 59 premium and business has been done at the increased figure; however, there are now plenty of shares on offer at the rate. No further business has been done in China Sugars, holders standing out for a higher rate. Other stocks remain as per quotation list.

4 o'clock p.m.

We have nothing further to chronicle from the Share Market since the issue of our morning sheet.

CHIARINI'S ROYAL ITALIAN CIRCUS.

Chiari's talented circus company gave another performance last night, when they were favoured with beautiful weather. There was a large audience who loudly applauded the artists, the oft-repeated "Kitchen Concert," "triple trapeze," and "horizontal bar" performances coming in for a full share of the kudos. Mr. Charles and Miss Ida Stoodley, described on the programme as "funambulists" whatever that term may mean, gave a very clever and graceful exhibition on the double invisible wires, and although the diminutive lady came to grief once or twice, the performance was a capital one and would stand repeating. Mr. Romano introduced his New Zealand pony "Job" and made the quadruped negotiate his hurdles in first-class style. "Perry (the Droll)" created quite a sensation with his dog "Romero" which rode like a veteran, taking the banners with ease and showing jumping powers of a very high order. "Romero" is a dog of a very peculiar class and varied experiences; he has performed often in different places and met many different sorts of people. His faculties are remarkably keen, and when one of the ribbon holders anathematised him last night for tumbling off the horse, when the assistant was solely to blame for the mishap, the look of contempt which graced the "Perry" of "Romero" was something sublime. Mr. Madigan, doubtless apologised to the canine member at the conclusion of the show. The other items on the programme were well received and the entertainment was brought to a close by the intrepid Johnsen entering the tiger cage and putting his paws through their facings. The company will perform again this evening when an attractive programme will be introduced. We hear that a special afternoon performance will be given on Thursday next, when Signor Chiarini will be honoured with the patronage of His Excellency, Sir George F. Bowen, and the Government House party. We trust the weather will be propitious on the auspicious occasion.

SHANGHAI.

The Anding, steam dredger, goes into the Old Dock to-night, to have her bows repaired. While on her last trial at the Woosung Bar, she came into collision with the lorcia Annie, and was obliged to return.

The Beijing Company, having completed their circuit along Broadway, the Bund, and the Malao, and their machinery in the new station in Chapoo Road being now complete, the lamps will be lighted at nine o'clock to-night, as an experiment, preparatory to entering on their contract with the Municipal Council to light the three principal thoroughfares of the Settlement.

It is rumoured amongst the Chinese that the Viceroys of the various provinces are to be changed, nearly all round. Li Hung-chang will resume his former post as Viceroy of Chihli; the present Viceroy of Chihli to be Viceroy of Kwangtung and Kwangsi; the present Viceroy of the Two Kwang to be Viceroy of Fokien and Chekiang; the present Viceroy of the latter provinces to be Viceroy of Hupeh and Honan; and the present Viceroy of the latter to be dismissed.

From a conversation with an intelligent Chinaman we learn the following as to the probability of war between France and China. A southern Viceroy has expressed his willingness, if he is relieved of his present duties, to take command of the Imperial troops. Li Hung-chang is wavering in his opinion, and has not definitely expressed himself. The Tung-tang is strongly in favour of going to war. Of the rest of the highest officials in Peking, eight are in favour of war and two against it. It is said the Empress Dowager asked those in favour of war what would be the result if they won, and what if they lost; and as might be supposed none of them were able to give a satisfactory answer. Courier.

We believe that Li Hung-chang has been ordered to return to the North. At the same time, we hear that his troops are being ordered from Chihli to Nanjing.

We understand that Meteorological Instruments intended for the General China Coast Meteorological Service left France for Shanghai on the 29th of May.

We hear that Mr. Tricou is now negotiating about an indemnity to be paid for the expenses he is put to by China's threats of war. It is said he asked five millions at first; and now they are negotiating about T. 1,000,000.

Mr. Dowdall, on behalf of Mr. John Morris, the plaintiff in a cause of salvage instituted against the brig Elliot, obtained an order from H.B.M.'s Supreme Court this morning authorising Mr. Robert Mackenzie to sell the ship by private contract for any sum not less than T. 1,000. We understand that later in the day the Elliot was sold for T. 1,000. The purchasers are Chinese.

We hear from a reliable authority that the new steam dredger, which was to clear away the "Heaven Sent Barrier" in the twinkling of an eye, is to be laid up, and her European crew discharged. We learn that this action is taken, not on account of the incompetence of the vessel, which has proved herself worthy in every respect, but in view of a rupture with France. The idea, of course, is silly in the extreme, and the probability is that the work will be proceeded with, without the aid of the "Celestial Element," as it is an undoubted fact that a powerful dredger could get a clear channel of 30 feet in less than six months. Mr. Watson, the agent, informs us that the vessel is in perfect working order, and that this has been certified by Mr. Warburg, Lloyd's Surveyor. We could tell a tale with regard to the scales of the Chinese on this question, and will probably do so on some future occasion. Mitruary.

HANKOW.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

The second crop of tea is coming in but slowly, owners not caring to pack on account of the heavy losses sustained by many merchants on the first of this season's teas. On the second crop, however, I hear that they are realising a slight profit.

The Glamis Castle is loading but slowly, and it is doubtful whether she will fill up at the rate of 50 tons. A large quantity of tea is being sent away for shipment to the mail and other steamers at Shanghai.

The Russian steamer Kotroma left here on Sunday morning for Odesa. Besides her cargo of tea, she takes about 250 Russian troops, returning home from Vladivostok. Our much respected resident, Mr. Ponomareff, who has been ailing for some time, passed also left in the Kotroma, with his wife and family.

A chartered steamer Waverly has loaded with Russian teas, and leaves to-morrow for the Amur.

A strong freshet came down the river on Saturday morning, and there was a sudden rise in the water; to-day the current is running strong, and the register shows a rise of ten inches during the last twenty-four hours.

From Wuchang there is but little news, and all appears to be quiet. The stevedore and conspirator, Chin Sah-wah, is still in gaol. Courier.

THE WRECK OF THE "SUMIDA MARU".

The Hogo News of June 15th gives the following particulars:—At about half-past three o'clock in the morning of the 15th the Sumida Maru was approaching the entrance to Shimonomaki Straits. The weather was bright starlight, with a haze on the water, and a perfectly smooth sea. Captain Hubenet, who has long since established for himself the reputation of being a careful and skilful navigator, was on the bridge, where indeed he had been all night. The vessel was going eleven knots, and drew about 18 feet of water, as she had a heavy cargo, principally sugar, of which there were some 1,400 tons on board. There was every prospect of a safe and pleasant run to Kobe, when suddenly the Sumida ran on a reef of sunken rocks lying about 100 feet from the Black Rock, Masuishima. At the place the vessel first struck there was only 6 inches less water than she was drawing, but any force of the shock knocked off a great portion of her bottom, and the fishermen in the locality say there is a pinnacle rock 12 feet high in her midst. The Sumida immediately filled, and fell over on her starboard side, every tide now lifting her more as the sugar melts out. The position of the wreck is very much exposed, except as regards easterly and southeast winds, and from what we can ascertain there seems but little chance of much being done by the vessels the Company have sent down to afford assistance.

Immediately the Sumida Maru struck, the boats were lowered, the mails, treasure and passengers—effects secured, and all on board got in. Captain Hubenet being the last to leave the ship. We are glad to be able to state that everything even at that trying moment was carried out in a cool, orderly manner, reflecting the utmost credit upon the discipline maintained in the ship, and the presence of mind of her officers and crew. Ultimately the passengers were landed on the mainland about 13 miles from Shimonomaki, and walked over to the town, where they were subsequently taken on board by the Genkai Maru, which also brought on the mails and treasure. Captain Hubenet and his officers are still at the wreck, together with the crew, and were busily engaged on the vessel, assisted by about 80 coolies and 200 Japanese sent down from Shimonomaki. The Tokai Maru is on the scene before now, and we hear the Takahiko Maru is on the way with a quantity of wrecking apparatus, so it is evident no effort has been neglected to save as much from the wreck as possible.

As there will of course be an inquiry into this unfortunate occurrence, it would be improper to say much on the subject now. However, in justice to Captain Hubenet, we feel constrained to state that a gentleman who has been actually on board the wreck of the Sumida, and who is thoroughly acquainted with the locality, says positively that the wreck is not laid down on the Admiralty charts, which show 14 fathoms of water at the spot where the Sumida now lies.

The Nagasaki Express says:—Hopes are entertained of being able to patch her up temporarily, and float her to Nagasaki, to assist in which task a party of engineers and divers from the Imperial Works at Akunoura, (including Mr. J. Dickson) proceeded to the scene of the wreck in a native steamer on Tuesday morning last. The result of the efforts to get her off, of course, principally depends upon the weather, which at this season is unfortunately very uncertain. The Co's steamship Tokai Maru, Capt. Carew, has, we believe, been despatched from Kobe, to take in the salvaged cargo and render any assistance that may be required. The Sumida Maru (formerly the Sumida) was a fine and comparatively new vessel, of 800 tons register and 200 h.p. Capt. Hubenet, her commander, has run her successfully for about six years, and he has long borne an excellent reputation as one of the most careful and experienced navigators on the coast.

OLD TIMES AROUND SWATOW.

DISORGANIZATION CAUSED BY THE REBELLION.

It will be remembered the Taiping Rebellion broke out in the Canton province. As it gained strength, and the column of insurgents moved northward, their track lay along the western border of this department, embracing nine districts. Many of the people in this region sympathised in the movement. Many adventurers joined the ranks of the rebels. They soon moved on, but left the whole country behind them in a state of anarchy. The mandarins were weak and soon found themselves unable to suppress sedition tendencies. Cases of personal outrage had to be neglected, and complaints of wrongs and outrages were heaped up in piles at the Yamen, but received no attention. The officials were afraid to make arrests.

Such a state of things was rapidly followed by social and political disorganization, which was destined to continue for fifteen or twenty years, until the advent of General Fung, of whom we shall speak hereafter. To be sure, there were mandarins appointed as usual, who came to the Yamen, attended to the small cases and let the large ones go. Meanwhile, the people began to do about as they pleased. The roads were infested with robbers. Bays and inlets swarmed with pirates. It became dangerous to travel. Boats always went armed with small cannon and a formidable array of long spears and stink-pots. Very small boats were obliged to stay closely about home. Travellers on land often had to go armed, and even then went with their way at times with trembling, for there were certain villages that became notorious for kidnapping. Men were seized and held for ransom, and treated with the greatest cruelty until the ransom was paid.

The large villages made themselves strong. Their gates and walls were guarded with jealous care. The spears stacked around the village gateways resembled the stores of an arsenal. In course of time, village became arrayed against village, and this would occur, not only in one place but in a score of different places at the same time. In other words, there would be many different fights going on between different villages, and these fights would have no connection with each other. Sometimes half a dozen villages would combine on one side and array themselves against half a dozen other villages. In these conflicts the smaller villages would go under. Many were completely destroyed. Houses were first pillaged, and then battered to the ground. Oftentimes not a single white one would be left. At other times the fight would be between two clans in the same village, and then the destruction was more rapid.

The causes of these village or clan fights were often most trivial. One fight with which the writer was acquainted, which lasted for weeks, and in which several persons were killed on both sides, began about a single duck. Another bloody fight began in a dispute about twenty cash in a gambling den. In ordinary times these petty disputes would have been settled quietly, but now magistrates had no power. Indeed, they were themselves afraid; often-times, to go to the village, and there were some towns through which the District Magistrate passed, only when compelled by dire necessity, and then in mid of stones. In the large towns the control of affairs passed usually into the hands of some one man whose family connections and wealth enabled him to assume leadership. His word became law, and in the boundaries of his own village carried more weight than did the proclamation of a Taotai. One of these large towns, with a population of about 10,000, was so completely under the exclusive control of this headman that he became, spoken of as the Emperor of Suai Leng. He passed sentence of death upon offenders at his own sweet will, and no man dared to question his action.

The manner of carrying on these village fights was unique. As soon as a state of war was declared between two villages, all others stood back to let them have it out. If the two parties had come out and had a square fight to settle their difficulties, the climax of injuries would soon have been reached, and the injury would have been much less in amount. But this was not their method. A state of mutual siege ensued. They watched for each other in small parties. They ambushed the farmer who happened to be out late or not too far away from his village, when they slew him with merciless rage. They destroyed each other's fields, and wasted each other's crops, and injured each other in every possible way. This state of things would be kept up for months, and even years. Every little while a victim would be slaughtered.

Occasionally, the feud would rise to the dignity of a field fight. Both sides would organize their men for a charge. They had a habit of sending at such times to hire what they called "Steel-shed soldiers," which may be freely translated, after the manner of their own slang, boss killers. These men were supposed to be experts in the art of helping to win in any particular emergency. On a certain day and hour the attacking party would rally forth in strength, with spears and banners and gongs and miscellaneous weapons of all sorts. The object would be to make a foray on the fields of their enemy, or perhaps assault some part of the village itself. The other side was on the look-out. Losing no time, its champions were called out to withstand the invaders, and another array of gongs, matchlocks, and spears was presented. The two lines stretched themselves out along the boundary lines between them, in squads of two and three and half a dozen, with great gaps of space between them. Each squad furnished its own generalship.

Then came the tug of war. They threw themselves into all manner of insulting and defiant attitudes. They waved their banners furiously. They shook themselves in phrensy. Volleys of terrible obscenities and maledictions passed to and fro. They abused each other, they cursed each other, they anathematised each other's parents and grand-parents and great-grand-parents. They informed each other fiercely, in accordance with most advanced Darwinian views, that the aforesaid ancient worthies, fathers and grandfathers were monkeys and pigs and baboons and hogs and dogs. They exhausted their vocabulary of curses on each other. If one would it have been for all parties if the engagement had ended with no greater casualties than for one expenditure of breath. But guns were used. There was a continual popping, and now and then a man fell. Besides, the spearmen would prod among the bushes. One party would come upon another so suddenly that there was no chance to flee. The stronger pounced on the weaker, then came a furious hacking and stabbing, and another victim was gathered. So the day wore away. At noon both sides usually stopped to cook rice. This was indispensable. If the fight was hot and continued for days or even weeks, cannon were brought in to help. Residents at Kakeich, taking an evening walk on the hill tops, could often see the smoke of these discharges and hear the dull booming of the guns across the bay, far away in the delta. Hated increased as the war went on, and so brutally savage did the combatants become that they would sometimes take out the hearts of the slain and eat them, mixed with garlic and onions. This horrible mixture is true beyond all doubt.

The village wars came last for ever. The mandarins did not interfere, as the quiet, although the noise of the cannon could be heard in their own Yamen. But when one or both parties were utterly exhausted, then came peace. There were two ways in which this was consummated. Either the mandarins stepped in at the opportune moment of exhaustion and completed the matter with heavy damages to both sides, or a powerful middle-man was invoked as umpire. Then came the settlement. The numbers of slain on each side were compared. The side that had slain a number in excess of the other must pay for the excess at the rate of about thirty dollars per head. Thus, if one side had killed thirty and the other forty there would be a debt of ten heads to the more valiant side, which would be commuted about three hundred dollars. This plan was taken where both sides were powerful. But where one village was very weak, it was sometimes pulled down and blotted out. Throughout the country, therefore, the destruction was fearful. Life was everywhere unsafe. Property was everywhere depreciated in value, and in some places almost worthless.

In this period comes O-Teng-Pue episode, of which we shall speak hereafter. Star in the East.

TIENTSIN.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

Tientsin is gradually improving, both from a local and foreign point of view. The latest idea is the introduction of water works machinery, for which object a Chinese Company has been formed with a capital of T. 200,000 in two thousand shares of T. 100 each. The Chinese entertain the idea more enthusiastically, in the hope that when carried into effect it will ensure cheapness and purity of water in addition to obviating the trouble and difficulty of bringing it from the river. When the pipes are laid down, the city roads will look a little more respectable, as they will not be constantly kept wet and muddy by water-carriers. The company estimate their charges at one cash per head a day, which calculation leads them to anticipate good profits and an ability to pay a fair dividend. Shares are shortly expected to be at a premium.

As soon as the water works are completed, steps will probably be taken towards the introduction of either gas or the electric light, as we have several good roads which require to be lighted at night. Gas would be cheaper here than it is at Shanghai, as Kaiping coals are being sold at T. 4.50 per ton. If this is done at all, a company will be formed by the Chinese for the purpose, as the foreign community do not appear to have much enterprise. This may be inferred from the circumstance that the introduction of gas was proposed by an old resident about twenty years ago, but met with no encouragement from foreigners, though the Chinese merchants subscribed for nearly one-third of the shares; this, the proposer, objected to, and as he had not the means to run the concern by himself, the project was abandoned. We are still suffering from drought; the long-looked-for shower has not yet come down. The Commissioner of Customs, having been down with fever for some weeks, has gone to Chefoo for change of air. A minstrel party has been formed and will give their first performance in a few days. Courier.

GETTING INFORMATION UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

"I do not see any peculiarity about your people," said an Eastern Judge, addressing his travelling companion, a well-known Arkansas lawyer. "I have traveled quite extensively in this State, and have not, as yet, found that eccentricity of action and prevarication of reply that has often amused me in the newspapers."

"You have done most of your travelling by rail," the lawyer replied. "This is your first trip away from the main roads, is it not?"

"Yes."

"Well, I'll show you some of our genuine natives. Yonder is a house. Call the landlord, and hold a conversation with him."

"Hallo!" cried the Judge.

"Comin'!" the man replied, depositing a child in the doorway, and advancing.

"How's all the folks?"

"Children's hearty; wife's not well. Aint' want you might call bed sick, but jest sorter sudy."

"Got anything to eat in the house?"

"Ef I had it anywhar, I'd have it in the house."

"How many children have you?"

"Many as I want."

"How many did you want?"

"Wan't hankerin' arter a powerful chance, but I'm satisfied."

"How long have you been living here?"

"Too long."

"How many years?"

"Been here ever since my oldest boy was born."

"That year was he born?"

"The year I come here."

"How old is your boy?"

"Ef he had lived, he would have been the oldest until yit; but, as he died, Jim's the oldest."

"How old is Jim?"

"He ain't as old as the one what died."

"Well, how old was the one that died?"

"He was older than Jim."

"What do you do here for a living?"

"Eat."

"How do you get anything to eat?"

"The best way we kin."

"How do you spend your Sundays?"

"Like the week days."

"How do you spend them?"

"Like Sundays."

"Is that your daughter, yonder?"

"No, sir; she ain't my daughter yonder, nor nowhere else."

"Is she a relative of yours?"

"Kin to your wife, I suppose."

"No kin to my wife, but she's kin to my children."

"How do you make that out?"

"She's my wife."

"How far is it to the next house?"

"It's called three miles, but the man what calls it that is a liar."

"I've got enough," said the Judge, turning to the lawyer. "Drive on. I pity the man who depends on this man for information." Arkansas Traveler.

MR. MOORE begs to recommend his LVI GOGO SHAMPOO WASH to the public as unrivalled by any preparation ever produced for promoting the growth of the hair. The basis of this compound is made of soap root; the natives of the Philippine Islands never use anything else for washing their hair; they are never found bald, and it is quite common to see the females with hair from 5 to 6 feet long. By constantly using this Shampoo Wash as directed, you will NEVER BE BALD.

The proprietor offers the Wash to the public entirely confident that by its restorative properties it will without fail arrest decaying hair. It completely eradicates scurf, dandruff, and cures all diseases of the scalp. It does not contain any poisonous drugs. By its cooling properties it allays the itching and fever of the scalp, which is the great cause of people losing their hair.

Mr. Moore has succeeded in being able to put this wash up in bottles without allowing it to ferment, and he will guarantee it to keep any length of time in any climate.

The Hongkong Telegraph

HONGKONG, TUESDAY, JULY 3, 1883.

In referring in our yesterday's share report to the June settlements we said:—"A few accounts have not been forthcoming, and more than one paper speculator has been compelled to strike his flag; however, matters have not been half so bad as was generally anticipated." A correspondent, who is doubtless qualified to offer an opinion on the subject, takes exception to our statements, and writes as follows:—"There are a great many more 'short-comers' in the June settlements on the share market than your remarks on the subject in yesterday's paper would lead the public to believe. And for this unsatisfactory result the reckless manner in which brokers introduce buyers to sellers is in a great measure responsible. Why should we not have in Hongkong a respectable Board of Brokers, who would be in a position to effectively protect the interests both of buyer and seller? With such an institution properly organised, what you sarcastically term 'a paper speculator' would not be possible. The margin fixed and invariably demanded would enable the share broker to protect both himself and his clients. A public room devoted exclusively to the sale of scrip, where the ruling values of the stocks would be stated, say twice a day, could surely be established without difficulty! In an exchange of this kind, if the gambler's margin were not sufficient to cover his 'bull' and 'bear' operations, the end of the day would practically finish him. This legitimate system of carrying on business would also protect the brokers from the suspicion of being implicated in any swindle, and prevent non-residents, who form a majority of the buyers, from investing their hard-earned savings in speculation on margins, which the present method permits. With many of these 'paper speculators' the revenue stamp binds the agreement only when the balance is on their right side; it is frequently ignored when they happen to lose."

We are quite ready to admit that there may be a good deal of truth and sound sense in our correspondent's remarks. It is unquestionable that there is plenty room for improvement in the conduct of our local share transactions, and possibly the remedies suggested above might to a considerable extent meet the difficulties of the position. There have lately been so many scandals associated with share-dealing on time, owing to those who have drawn blanks in the exciting game of speculation being unable to meet their liabilities, that in the interests of all concerned, both of brokers and their clients, it would perhaps be politic to do something to place the business on a firmer and more reliable basis. It is, however, for those who have interests at stake, to take the initiative. The establishment of a public stock exchange might have the desired effect; but judging from the total failure of an almost similar institution started under powerful auspices a few years ago, one would scarcely be justified in indulging in sanguine hopes. The spirit of share speculation is no doubt strongly developed in this community; it is a legitimate business enough, and if some plan could be devised to effectually prevent men of straw from reckless gambling on the mere prospect of a rise or fall, as the case may be, there would be little room for public animadversion. For their own protection the brokers ought certainly to do something to prevent the recurrence of recent scandals.

TELEGRAMS.

LONDON, June 30th.

M. TRICOU AND LI HUNG-CHANG.
The Marquis Tsong has received a telegram which states that M. Tricou has behaved so rudely to Li Hung-chang that negotiations are at a standstill.

THE EPIDEMIC IN EGYPT.

Cholera rages unabated at Damietta, and Austria, France, Italy, Turkey, and Greece are enforcing strict quarantine.

RUSSIA REFUSES TO ACT AS A MEDIATOR BETWEEN FRANCE AND CHINA.
It is semi-officially announced that Russia is indisposed to mediate between France and China.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

A REGULAR LODGE OF ZETLAND, No. 535, will be held in Freemasons' Hall, Zetland Street, to-night, at 8.30 for 9 o'clock precisely.

The British brig Elliot was sold at Shanghai by Messrs. Mackenzie & Co. on the 26th ult. for £15,000. The purchasers are Chinese.

To-morrow being the 10th anniversary of American Independence, we doubt not that the "Yanks" intend keeping up the day in a suitable manner.

We note that the steamer Alinga has been placed alongside Messrs. Boyd & Co's upper dock at Shanghai, to undergo the repairs necessitated by her recent typhoon experiences.

We have much pleasure in informing the public that the Canton and Hongkong Wa Hop Telegraph line is now in perfect working order, and that in all probability it will be opened for traffic on or about Monday, the 9th instant.

The Shanghai Mercury understands that the negotiations now going on between Mr. Tricou and Li Hung Chang, and which led to such lengthy telegrams, are on the subject of the massacre of the French priest in Yunnan, and about opening a port to the French for trade in Yunnan. The subject of Annam is not mentioned, we believe.

EMMA R—, asks this extraordinary question—"Do you think, Mr. Editor, it is right for a girl to sit on a young man's lap if she is engaged to him?" Oh, Emma, how could you? Well, though we have no practical experience in the matter referred to, we should be inclined to say—if our girl and our lap, yes; if another girl and our lap, yes; but if our girl and another fellow's lap, never. We trust Emma will feel quite happy after this expression of opinion.

THE brave know only how to forgive; it is the most refined and generous pitch of virtue human nature can arrive at. Cowards have done good and kind actions, cowards have even fought, nay, sometimes have even conquered, but a coward never forgave; it is not in his nature; the power of doing it, blows only from a strength of greatness of soul conscious of its own force and sincerity and above the little temptations of resenting every fruitless attempt to interrupt its happiness.

In the Supreme Court to-day, before the full court, was heard a motion for appeal on behalf of Messrs. Melchers & Co; against whom judgment for $1,000 and costs was given by Mr. Justice Russell in Summary Jurisdiction on the 15th ultimo in the suit, instituted by Messrs. Asger and Esmail and the Oriental Bank Corporation, for loss on opium said to have been damaged in Messrs. Melchers & Co's godowns. Mr. Francis, instructed by Messrs. Brereton, Wotton and Deacon, appeared for the appellants and argued the motion before their lordships, who decided to take the matter into consideration.

We beg to direct attention to a performance to be given at the Garrison Theatre, Artillery Barracks, this evening, by the "Southern Star Minstrels," which combination is composed of a numerous section of the old Maudslon troupe which lately appeared here and in Shanghai. The break up of the old company has left many of these wandering minstrels considerably in "queer street," and they are trying to work their way back to a country where the audiences are less refined and exacting than those they struck here, and where expenses are less heavy and "show" towns and cities more numerous than is the case in this quarter of the world. An excellent programme has been arranged and as the old favorites, Messrs. Bowman, Jackson, Billy Wilson and several others are billed to appear, they should, under ordinary circumstances, attract a large crowd. We hope they will receive extensive patronage, but with the circus running against them, we are rather afraid that the support will not be so great as the abilities of the performers deserve.

FROM our Shanghai advices we are now in a position to give the results of this year's "Tea Race." The Stirling Castle left Hankow at 3.10 a.m. on Monday May 22nd, passed the lightship at Woosung on the 24th at 12.10 a.m., reached Singapore at one o'clock on the afternoon of the 29th, left at four o'clock the following morning, arrived at Suao on June 12th at noon, and passed Gravesend at noon on June 22nd. The Glenlogie departed from Hankow at 11.15 a.m. on May 20th, left Woosung at 11.10 p.m. on the 22nd, reached Singapore at 2.30 p.m. on the 29th, and arrived at Gravesend on June 26th, at 3 p.m. It will thus be seen that the Stirling Castle accomplished the journey from Hankow to Gravesend in 31 days, 8 hours and 50 minutes, beating the Glenlogie by 5 days, 18 hours and 55 minutes. From Woosung the time of the Stirling Castle was 29 days 11 hours and 50 minutes, which was exactly 5 days and 1 hour faster than the man of the Glenlogie. The above times, of course, include all stoppages, as far as the Stirling Castle is concerned, the fastest on record.

THAT was a novel complaint which an "elderly man" preferred in a London police court a few weeks ago. He declared that his son, who had a large family, had insisted upon burying his deceased children in a grave which the complainant had purchased for himself. "The consequence will be," said the elderly man, "that by-and-by there won't be room for me; and that's a very uncomfortable thought for a man who has taken the trouble to provide a last resting-place for himself, as I have done. It's too bad, you know."

It may be reassuring to some minds to know that a canal from Alexandria was conceived by an Englishman some three centuries ago, some years before M. de Lesseps was born or thought of. The said Englishman was Christopher Marlowe, who puts these words into the mouth of his Tamburlaine:—
And here not far from Alexandria
Whereas the Terrene (the Mediterranean) and the Red Sea meet,
Being distant less than five hundred leagues,
I meant to cut a channel to them both,
That men might quickly sail to India.
Sir Walter Scott alludes in one of his novels to the practicability of connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea by means of a canal, and the scheme was foreshadowed by numbers of other well known characters before the beginning of the present century. To M. de Lesseps, however, belongs the credit of carrying out the project.

This year's Derby Day, says "Gill Blase," was but a dull business—dull (almost) as Mr. Frith's immortal picture. Beau Brummell collapsed; Highland Chief waited too long, and did not win; St. Blaise came soon enough and carried off the blue ribbon; Archer was only third, and Fordham nowhere—that, to a layman, is a correct description of the race itself. As for the race-day, there were two-and-fifty cases of gambling and pocket-picking up for judgment at Epsom. Police Court on Thursday morning; there was more gambling with tables, according to Inspector Shore, than in any previous year; and all day the detectives sent down were occupied in chasing the hell-keeper and his victims from one part of the Downs to another. As for the road, there was no brutality to horses, no fighting, no drunkenness, no dolls, no blue veils, no pea-shooters, no fun of any sort. The energy of the nation has been absorbed (it would seem) by the Salvation Army; and the Derby Day will presently come to mean, not champagne and mayonnaise, but sodone and the drum ecclesiastic. That much seems certain.

A CABLEGRAM from London to the New York Star, dated the 29th May, says:—"The results of the accident to the Queen's knee through her fall at Windsor Castle are charged with her present illness. She has for years suffered from gout, as a result of liberal living and insufficient exercise, and the membranes of her joints have probably become more or less inflamed. The knee-sprain, while troublesome enough in itself, was only secondary to the jar to which the hip joint was subjected by the fall. This jar led directly to sciatic troubles, from which the royal patient has suffered terribly. After all lighter means of relief had been tried, the physicians were compelled to resort to hypodermic injections of morphia in order to secure to Her Majesty any relief whatever. On many occasions, after great pain and loss of sleep, she has been temporarily quite beyond control. The fall, sprain and inflammation allowed the gout, whose existence and tendency has long been known, to ascend to the hip, where the sympathy of the sciatic nerve was at once excited. Usually in a person who in other respects does not possess excellent health, this is the fatal point in the gout. That the physicians believe this may be the case with the Queen and that they fear almost immediate danger of a fatal result is beyond question. Many minor acts tend to corroborate this impression, not the least of which is the great grief John Brown affected after the fall on the stairway and his evident fear that the accident might have a more serious outcome than could possibly have been foreseen from any information on the subject which was given to the public. The real trouble, as outlined in this dispatch, has been kept carefully out of sight."

THE unpleasant feeling on the subject of a second Canal through the Isthmus of Suez continues, and is not, according to a writer in the Overland Mail, likely to be mitigated by the latest development of the question. The well-informed Paris correspondent of the Standard says, "on the most unquestionable authority," that M. de Lesseps's Company has submitted proposals to the British Government which, if the story be true, are of the highest importance. The Company, in short, proposes nothing less than to commence the parallel Canal "without further delay." With this purpose it has, we are told, sought the influence of England with the Egyptian Government in favour of its application for the necessary concession of land. At the same time it has not forgotten the question of the reduction of tariffs, about which it has submitted some tempting proposals; and the Suez Canal Administration is convinced that if its plans are accepted English shipowners "will acknowledge that all their demands have been complied with, and all their wants supplied." This is very polite of the Administration, but we doubt very much whether English shipowners will do anything of the kind. We doubt, also, whether the British Government would be wise in having anything whatever to do with the scheme. British shipowners want a British canal uncontrolled by foreign Governments; and that is precisely what the Suez Canal Company cannot give them, and would not if it could. It looks very much as though we were to have a revival of French interference in Egypt; and a second French canal would merely strengthen the hands of the French Government without satisfying our commercial and political necessities. In fact, we should not be surprised to learn that this sudden initiative of the Canal Administration is inspired and aided by the French Government itself.

AN American paper says that the term "opium joint" appears so often in print that an explanation seems appropriate. The heathen Chinese, being naturally an imitator, borrows an idea from the "Melican-man." It did not take him long to learn the advantage of club life. "Melican-man join—John Chinaman join too." "Joint" is therefore only another term for "club," but it is now applied to every place where opium is used for intoxicating purposes.

WE read that Mr. H. B. Sheridan, the patentee of some twenty electrical machines, has applied for a patent for what he terms "An improved device for executing criminals condemned to death." He accompanied his application by an assignment transferring to the Government the right to use his invention. He also intends to give it to all foreign governments that may desire it. The patent office returned the assignment to him, saying that it had no power to receive it. Sheridan's device is a method of causing instantaneous death without pain to the criminal, and without disfiguring his body. It consists of an ordinary arm-chair with legs, containing some substance which will insulate the body of the chair from the floor. The arms end in two brass knobs on which the hands of the criminal will rest. The chair has a foot rest on which is fitted a brass plate. From the knobs and the foot rest run electric wires, connecting with a collar containing brass points that press against the criminal's neck. A shock of electricity finishes the job.

THE French corvette Kersaint left this morning for Shanghai to attend on M. Tricou, in consequence of orders received direct from the French Government in Paris. Notwithstanding all that has been preached about the certainty of an amicable arrangement on the Tongking affairs being arrived at between the French and Chinese Governments, it cannot be denied that we are at present nearer a declaration of war than has yet been the case. From the manner in which the new French Ambassador has conducted the negotiations, so far, with Li Hung Chang, it would appear as if France had made up its mind to force China to fight. This is not the case, however. M. Tricou accepted a most difficult position in the belief that under no circumstances would China dare to oppose French pretensions in Tongking, and it is no doubt in this belief that, as Reuter expresses it, he has behaved so rudely to Li Hung-chang that negotiations are at a standstill. Unless something unforeseen intervenes, the arrival of the Kersaint in Shanghai may be practically taken to mean that if China declines to accede to M. Tricou's demands, an ultimatum will quickly follow. Chinese politics are difficult to follow, but we have it from what ought to be a reliable source, that China has determined to fight, and is moreover in better condition for the fray than is generally believed. A few days more will definitely settle the question of peace or war.

A CORRESPONDENT writes under yesterday's date:—"I have only been a few days in this colony, but have already heard a great deal about the extensive gambling in shares and stocks. To-day I was an unwilling witness of a little episode which considerably opened my eyes to the fashion in which this class of business is conducted. I am staying at the Hongkong Hotel and was passing through the lobby, when my attention was attracted to an altercation which was taking place between three gentlemen, apparently for the edification of a considerable number of people who were intently watching proceedings. 'One of the gentlemen was a tall, well-dressed and rather gentlemanly-looking young fellow (a broker I have since learned), the second a well built, sturdy man with bronzed complexion, which indicated the seafaring profession, and the third evidently an Asiatic. From the rather warm discussion that took place, I gathered that the seafaring gentleman, whom the others addressed as Captain, had purchased some shares, China Sugars I think they called them, through the tall young fellow, from the Asiatic, the scrip to be taken delivery of on June 30th. The Captain had sent the broker the cheque covering cost of purchase in due course, but it turned out that the Asiatic had, as a matter of fact, no shares to sell, and merely had gone in for a bit of a gamble on the chance that the stock would fall. These anticipations were not realised; the stock instead of conveniently falling a few points to enable this speculator to pocket a comfortable difference had gone up considerably, and the result was that the broker was made to look exceedingly foolish whilst his Asiatic client was completely 'cornered.' The Captain was evidently a man of business, and a dangerous customer to tackle. In response to the Asiatic gentleman's tale of woe about losses on Luzons and other stocks, the Captain told him in very decisive terms that as he could not produce the shares he had sold, he would have to 'pay the difference between the purchased price and the current rate. 'If you don't hand over that money by three o'clock' said the hairy man, 'I don't care if I don't give you a good licking. There is no occasion to go down to Bowington to see Chiarini's Circus, for I will give you a good circus exhibition in this hotel.' Some further discussion took place, the broker also coming in for a fair share of the Captain's censure. I understood the Asiatic to promise that he would do his best to get the money by the time appointed; but whether he did so or not I am unable to say. Thinking the circumstance a rather strange one, and having taken quite a fancy to the independent and plain spoken style of your paper, I thought I would send you what may perhaps be considered an interesting item of gossip.' Our correspondent's plainly written statement speaks for itself. We have verified the details and have nothing to add to a capital story, admirably told.

WE do not like to disparage artistic merit in the sketch map (?) of the seat of war (?) in Tongking in Monday night's Anaides, brings to our sorrowful recollection Ally Sloper's "Guide to Paris," wherein an "explanation of last night's 'fly squabble' may be found.

A LONDON society journal relates that when one of the daughters of the match-making Duchess of Gordon eloped, it became necessary to apprise her mother of the fact. Her daughter had run away with a young lord with whom she had been dancing at a ball given by the Duke of Devonshire. "Oh, heavens!" cried the poor mother, "on such a cold night, too, and without her flannel petticoat! And to think that it is all my fault, because I wanted to set off the delicacy of her shape to catch the Duke of Bedford."

CHUN AKAN, an old gaoi bird, described as a hawker by profession and a thief by inclination, faced Mr. Wodehouse this morning on a charge of stealing a $1 note from Edward Dowling, a seaman. The "tar" stated that yesterday at about 7.30 p.m. he went to East Street in order to buy a pair of shoes. He had the dollar note in his pocket. As he was standing on the footway lighting a cigar, the prisoner, who was standing near him, thrust his hand into his pocket, snatched the bank note and handed it over to one of the bystanders who ran away like a demon. The theft was so dexterously done that "jack" was only in time to grab the audacious thief by the collar. After a desperate struggle, however, Mr. Chun managed to rid himself from the seaman's grasp, leaving his coat behind in the "horny paws of the toiler of the deep." Dowling was afterwards called to the police station where he saw the enterprising pedestrian who had snatched him of his note. Lo Tung Chi E.C. 164, doing duty in plain clothes at East Street, stated that he arrested the prisoner in Lascar Row in consequence of information received. The prisoner had no coat on and the complainant identified him at the station. Mr. E. L. Rocha, master of ceremonies at the "Hotel," testified to having known Mr. Chun since 1879, and stated that his record would show no less than six previous convictions. His Worship remanded the case till to-morrow.

THE plain unvarnished truth. Supreme Court House. Time—the present.

Mr. Fitzurse—Ah, you know, you really want too much for the books?

Mr. Prickly Heat—Can assure you, Mr. Fitzurse, very valuable digests; cost me ever so much.

Mr. Fitzurse—Well, upon honor, I can't afford to give more than thirty dollars for them. If you won't take that I think, ah, that we will consider negotiations closed.

Mr. Prickly Heat—But I paid 60 cents for a bottle of varnish to use for the covers so as to keep away the cockroaches. You ought you know to refund me that sum.

Mr. Fitzurse (after considerable hesitation)—But did you use all the varnish, the whole sixty cents worth on these books?

Mr. Prickly Heat—Well, ah, yes, that is to say, no—not quite all.

Mr. Fitzurse (solemnly)—Now, Mr. Heat, just be good enough to answer my question in a straightforward manner. How much of the varnish did you have left?

Mr. Prickly Heat—(After a few minutes consideration)—I think that perhaps about one sixth of the varnish was left.

Mr. Fitzurse—Then, ah, I think you ought to hand me over the balance of the varnish left. When one comes to consider it, by Jove, sixty cents seems a lot of money to pay for varnishing the covers of a few books. What do you say?

Mr. Prickly Heat—I can't give you the varnish that was left, because I used it for some other books of my own.

Mr. Fitzurse—Indeed; then as you say you only used five sixths of the varnish on these books, and the other sixth on your own books, it seems to me as a matter of equity, ah, that I am entitled to a consideration. Now as one sixth of sixty cents is ten cents, if we deduct the ten from the sixty the balance will be fifty. I propose therefore to give you $50 for the books, and 50 cents for the varnish.

Mr. Prickly Heat—It is very hard I should lose the ten cents, and I really think that in consideration of all the circumstances you ought to—(our reporter left the two gentlemen arguing the point, and we afterwards learned that $50.50 was the amount finally agreed on.

A LETTER to the Standard signed "Veteran" says:—"I trust you will pardon me if I point out that in the commendation you bestow on both Sir Harry Parkes and Sir Thomas Wade, as sinologists, you scarcely allow what is due to some others of the tribe living and dead. When Lord Elgin arrived in China in 1857 there were available no fewer than eight gentlemen who had at one time or other discharged the duties of Consul Interpreter at one or other of the open ports. Mr. Medhurst and Mr. Parkes were already Consul. Mr. Wade was Chinese Secretary, Mr. Crofton Morrison was Assistant Chinese Secretary, Mr. Thomas Meadows, Mr. Sinclair, and Mr. Gingsell were interpreters in different Consulates. Lastly, Mr. Horatio Lay, who had commanded his career in our service, was now in the service of the Chinese, a member of the foreign triumvirate charged with the collection of the duties on foreign trade at Shanghai. Mr. Wade, as Chinese Secretary to the Superintendent of Trade, which at the time supplied the place of a Legation, was attached in the same capacity to Lord Elgin's Mission. His fidelity as a translator of correspondence, and his acquaintance with the official literature of China enabled him without doubt to render services of no little value. Two speakers there were indisputably superior as speakers to all their fellows. Mr. Thomas Meadows possessed a curiously accurate knowledge of the Court dialect. He was besides a man of immense erudition, of the most solid attainments, not in Chinese alone. Mr. Horatio Lay had a larger and more available command with the Court dialect than even Mr. Meadows. It is a pleasure to hear him speak our language, said an old Mandarin. Another junior of great promise was Mr. Crofton Morrison, youngest brother of the first Chinese Secretary, who had come out to China in 1842. He spoke a very elegant Chinese, and he was gifted with that kind of instinct which makes a trustworthy translator of difficult texts. His English, moreover, was invariably pure."

CHENG-AWING, a coolie, was committed for trial at the Supreme Court by Mr. Wodehouse this morning for stealing the sum of $100 from George Young, Diocesan Home Scholar, East street yesterday. It appears master Y. was taking the money home to Mr. Pic having been to the bank. He was walking along East street with a chum of his when the wily Celestial grabbed the bundle of $5 notes which was in his breast pocket and would have bolted away with it but for his collaring the thief. Mr. Cheng then dropped the notes on the ground which the plucky scholar picked up without relaxing his hold of the pick-pocket. The barefaced Cheng, however, slipped through his jacket and ran away. James Smith P.C. 87, gave evidence to seeing the lad struggle with the defendant. He never lost sight of the thief as he gave chase and arrested him. Mr. E. L. Rocha produced his voluminous "Recorder" when it was found that Mr. Cheng Aving had been in the "hotel" for priggish on two previous occasions.

SCENE—corridor of the Hongkong Hotel: Dramatis personae—three well-known local celebrities whom we will name "The Colonel," McGrowler of that ilk, and "Bones." The Colonel—"What do you think of this latest appointment of the Governor's?" Bones—"Which appointment do you mean?" The Colonel—"Why Deane's successor, of course." McGrowler—I see the Telegraph has been rubbing it in hot to the Governor." The Colonel—"Yes, and I reckon with good reason this time; it looks a shameful business." Bones—"Well, all I can say is that it is a d—d shame. Old Hennessy was bad enough, but he was hardly so bad faced as this man." McGrowler—"You are quite right, William, it is a d—d shame." The Colonel—"Who is this Dempster anyhow? All that we know about him is that he is Captain Dempster. I'm dry, boys. What do you say to 'shedding a tear' in honor of the Telegraph?" Bones—I'm there, my boy. Come along Mac—exclaiming owner to renew the discussion in front of the bar.

ICHANG.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

20th June, 1883.
The country round Ichang is a grand resort for sportsmen, geologists and forists. About twenty miles below it is the walled city of Yichang situated on a river of the same name, which flows into the Yangtze, and is a fine clear stream about a hundred yards in width. This river is navigable for 400 miles. For the first forty miles navigation is quite easy, but in the upper part many rapids occur. There is a great traffic in coal which is sent down in flat-bottomed boats from the Paoching mines.

Five hours from Ichang per native boat brings us to Yichang where we have to change to a rapid boat which is quite comfortably fitted up. After travelling for two days we reach the district of Yanglo, where the country is very mountainous and where the sport begins. I am told by a gentleman who lived there for four years that leopards, small black bears, wild cats, silver foxes, musk deer and wild boars are numerous, and do not require much hunting, as they continually prowled about habitations, from which they often carry off children, dogs and pigs. The Reeves, tragopans and golden pheasants are plentiful.

The mineral wealth is abundant. I was shown some very fine specimens of copper, and lead ore by a gentleman who has just returned from Yanglo, who also gives a wonderful account of the flowers, ferns, and fossils he met with there. The natives of that district are very friendly, and a great many of them are Roman Catholics. A hundred years ago they were not under Chinese rule, and even at the present day they differ from the Celestials in physique, habits, manners and customs. The wages of a carrying coolie is 100 cash per day, and fowls, eggs, potatoes and vegetables are obtainable at reasonable rates. Gentlemen who are fond of sport, botany or geology had better give Yanglo a trial.

The community of Ichang were alarmed by the visit of a leopard the other night, which made and on the premises of a farmer and killed one of the only two goats the man possessed. The next night a young man, who has a greater share of pluck than his neighbours, armed himself with a duck gun, mounted a tree about fifteen yards from where the remaining goat was grazing, and awaited the return of the leopard who soon made his appearance. The man took aim, but for some reason or another the gun would not go off, and so the leopard escaped. The next night another sportsman took his luck. He equipped himself with a double-barrelled gun, a bundle of cigars and matches and a copy of the Dublin Advertiser, and took his post in an empty pig's house. Finding the mosquitoes troublesome he thought he would smoke a cigar, but his matches being damp he had to strike a great many of them before he succeeded in getting a light. Whilst so engaged the leopard gave him the slip, went to a neighbouring farm-yard and helped himself to a pig. Three nights afterwards he visited another farm and again partook of uncooked pork.

The little paddle steamer, Coma, created quite a sensation when she went to sea last trip, and being equipped with a 4.5 ft. gun, she has been built at Suao. The paddle was constructed at Shanghai by the well-known firm Fau Chong. Her average speed is about 31 miles per hour.

The watermark is showing 21 feet at present, but it has been as high as 29 ft. and as low as 13 ft. Since the 1st April there has been a continual rise and fall. The weather is still unsettled. In consequence of the heavy rain that has fallen, the wheat crop is almost a failure, one half of it being rotten. Rice is selling at 55 per picul at present. The Kiangling brought a few hundred piculs, and barbers supplies are daily arriving by native boats.

Cholera is still prevailing. Many natives are dying and the presence of disease has been general over Ichang. The 14 ft. gun, the "barbed thousand yeagers," has been hailed down, and only the bare staff marks the place where it once floated in the breeze and reminded us of the grand old country far away.

Missionaries are said to be doing a great work amongst the natives in and around Ichang.
